Ch XV. On the Employment of Time

THE greater number of mankind employ their time badly; many others are perfectly embarrassed by their time, and do not know how to employ it, or rather, how to lose it; their sole object is to fritter it away, to pass it agreeably to themselves, or at least without feeling themselves wearied and bored.

...Let us now propose for Christians and interior souls some salutary and useful reflections. What is time, with regard to myself? It is my present and actual existence. Past time, or my past existence, is no longer anything, as far as I am concerned; I can neither recall it, nor change anything in it. The time to come, or my future existence, has not yet arrived, and perhaps never will arrive. It does not depend upon me; I cannot count upon it; and the most powerful monarch in the world cannot make sure of one single instant of life. No one is ignorant of these two simple truths, but very few draw from them the conclusions they ought to draw.

It is true and certain that I have only belonging to me the present moment, which cannot be divided, which nothing can fix, not even thought, and which is passing away with a rapidity which nothing can equal.

This present moment, or this actual existence, from whom do I hold it? From God. It is He Who called me from nothing into being, twenty, thirty, forty years ago, more or less: it is He Who has preserved my existence from one instant to another, and Who is preserving it at this present moment. Will He preserve it for me in the moment which shall immediately follow this one? I do not know; and nothing in the world can give me the assurance of it.

Why has time been given to me? That by it I may merit a happy eternity. I shall live forever: faith teaches me this: my reason even assures me of another life: the desire of immortality is implanted in the depths of my heart; and this desire, which God Himself has planted there, can never be frustrated of its object. I am, then, born for eternity; but this eternity will be happy or wretched; and that is according to the use I make of time. If I sincerely repent of the bad use of time I have made in the past, if I am beginning to make a good use of it, if I persevere in this good use until the moment comes when time shall cease for me, then I shall be eternally happy. If I have made a bad use of time in the past, if I am still doing so, if I continue to do so, and death surprises me in this state, I shall be eternally miserable.

My fate for all eternity depends, then, upon the use I make of time; and since neither the past nor the future are in my own power, it is quite true to say that my eternity depends always upon the present moment.

Padre Grou, Manual para Almas Interiores, Capítulo XV. Sobre el empleo del tiempo

LA mayor parte de la humanidad emplea mal su tiempo; muchos otros están perfectamente avergonzados de su tiempo, y no saben cómo emplearlo, o más bien, cómo perderlo; su único objetivo es desperdiciarlo, pasarlo agradablemente, o al menos sin sentirse cansados y aburridos.

...Propongamos ahora a los cristianos ya las almas interiores algunas reflexiones saludables y útiles. ¿Qué es el tiempo, con respecto a mí mismo? Es mi existencia presente y actual. El tiempo pasado, o mi existencia pasada, ya no es nada para mí; No puedo ni recordarlo, ni cambiar nada en él. El tiempo por venir, o mi existencia futura, aún no ha llegado, y tal vez nunca llegue. No depende de mí; No puedo contar con ello; y el monarca más poderoso del mundo no puede asegurarse un solo instante de vida. Nadie ignora estas dos simples verdades, pero muy pocos sacan de ellas las conclusiones que deben sacar.

Es cierto y cierto que sólo me pertenece el momento presente, que no se puede dividir, que nada puede fijar, ni siquiera el pensamiento, y que va pasando con una rapidez que nada puede igualar.

Este momento presente, o esta existencia real, ¿de quién la tengo? De Dios. Es Él Quien me llamó de la nada al ser, hace veinte, treinta, cuarenta años, más o menos: es Él Quien ha preservado mi existencia de un instante a otro, y Quien la preserva en este momento presente. ¿Me lo guardará en el momento que seguirá inmediatamente a éste? No lo sé; y nada en el mundo puede darme la certeza de ello.

¿Por qué se me ha dado tiempo? Que por ella pueda merecer una feliz eternidad. Viviré para siempre: la fe me enseña esto: mi razón me asegura incluso otra vida: el deseo de la inmortalidad está implantado en lo más profundo de mi corazón; y este deseo, que Dios mismo ha plantado allí, nunca puede ser frustrado en su objeto. Soy, pues, nacido para la eternidad; pero esta eternidad será feliz o desgraciada; y eso es de acuerdo con el uso que hago del tiempo. Si me arrepiento sinceramente del mal uso que he hecho del tiempo en el pasado, si comienzo a hacer un buen uso de él, si persevero en este buen uso hasta que llegue el momento en que el tiempo se acabe para mí, entonces ser eternamente feliz. Si he hecho un mal uso del tiempo en el pasado, si lo sigo haciendo, si sigo haciéndolo, y la muerte me sorprende en este estado, seré eternamente miserable.

Mi destino para toda la eternidad depende, pues, del uso que haga del tiempo; y puesto que ni el pasado ni el futuro están en mi poder, es muy cierto decir que mi eternidad depende siempre del momento presente.

FIFTEENTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

O God, who show the light of your truth to those who go astray, so that they may return to the right path, give all who for the faith they profess are accounted Christians the grace to reject whatever is contrary to the name of Christ and to strive after all that does it honor.

Through our Lord Jesus Christ, your Son, who lives and reigns with you in the unity of the Holy Spirit, God, for ever and ever.

Amen.

"I consider that the sufferings of this present time are as nothing compared with the glory to be revealed for us" (Romans 8:18).
